

CEFS Author Series:
Gary Nabhan, Ethnobiologist

Conservation You Can Taste: The Role of Ethnobiologists in the Collaborative Conservation of Food Diversity

October 14, 2016

Time: 7:30 pm - 8:30 pm

Location: J.C. Raulston Arboretum, 4415 Beryl Road, Raleigh, NC 27606

More Information: <http://go.ncsu.edu/cefs-gary-nabhan>

Cost: $10.00 for Friends of the JC Raulston Arboretum members, $20.00 for nonmembers, FREE for students (must present ID at door) Parking: Free parking is available at the JC Raulston Arboretum and along Beryl Road

This lecture, "Conservation You Can Taste: The Role of Ethnobiologists in the Collaborative Conservation of Food Diversity", will highlight the fundamental role ethnobiologists have played in conservation collaborations with indigenous communities, farmers, and chefs to revive and adapt traditional place-based foods. It will draw upon two chapters in the anthology that focus on biocultural and eco-gastronomic restoration.

About Gary Nabhan:

A MacArthur Fellow and recipient of a Lifetime Achievement Award from the Society for Conservation Biology, Gary Paul Nabhan is the Kellogg Chair in Southwest Borderlands Food and Water Security at the University of Arizona, where he is also a research social scientist at the Southwest Center. He is the author or editor of more than twenty-six books.

Books for Sale and Book Signing:

The JC Raulston Arboretum will have several of Gary's books on sale at the event. Gary will be on hand at 7:00pm for a book signing.

PRESENTED BY

Sustainable Agriculture Graduate Student Organization

CEFS

North Carolina State University College of Agriculture & Life Sciences

North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University
School of Agriculture &
Environmental Sciences

North Carolina Department of Agriculture & Consumer Services

If you are a person with a disability or desire for any assistive devices, services or other accommodations to participate in these activities, please contact 919-513-0954 during business hours of 8am to 5pm at least two weeks before the event to request accommodations.